The City of Norman will continue its public discussion series regarding high density development on Thursday, August 30 from 6:30 -8:30 pm at the Norman High School Conference Center (911 W. Main St.). The location of this meeting is moving back to its previous location at the Norman High School Conference Center after being located at the Norman High School Library for the August 13 public discussion. A map outlining directions to the Conference Center location and parking lot is posted on the High Density Public Discussion webpage on the City's website.

This public discussion will be the sixth and final meeting in the high density public discussion series. The focus of this meeting will be a review of the information that has been gathered from the roundtable discussions at the previous five meetings, along with scenario-based "dot democracy" that allows participants to comment on and vote on their opinion regarding features of high density that they may or may not like to see implemented. The program will begin with a short introduction about the process, and groups will then engage in the scenario-based exercise. Moderators and City staff will be available to help answer participant questions. The information and feedback from these public discussions will be used by the City to help guide future policies related to high density development. Anyone interested in high density development is invited to take part in the meeting.

Citizens wishing to stay informed about the meetings are encouraged to visit the City's website and sign-up for the email list for updates regarding the high density public discussion series. Information, meeting materials and presentations from each meeting will be posted on the City's website. Updates will also be available on the City's Facebook page and Twitter account.
